Definitions

Substance Abuse Prevention

The Center for Substance Abuse Prevention defines prevention as "a process that empowers individuals to meet the challenges of life by creating and reinforcing healthy behavior and lifestyles and by reducing the risks that contribute to alcohol, tobacco and other drug misuse and abuse."

Substance Abuse Prevention Services

Prevention services are based on the Center for Substance Abuse Prevention's six strategy categories:

Information Dissemination – Involves one-way communication from the source to the audience to provide awareness and knowledge of the nature and extent of substance abuse and addiction and its effects on individuals, families, and communities. It may be a one-time event. It is not organization promotion.

Education - Involves two-way communication with interaction between the facilitator and the participants to improve critical life and social skills. Multiple sessions are usually included.

Alternatives - Provides for the participation of target populations in activities that exclude substance abuse. Providers offer technical assistance to assist in planning community events.

Environmental - Establishes or changes written and unwritten community standards, codes, and attitudes, thereby influencing substance abuse by the general population.

Problem Identification and Referral – Aims to classify those who have used substances inappropriately or illegally and determine whether their behavior can be reversed through education. It does not include any function designed to determine whether a person is in need of treatment.

Community-Based Process – Aims to enhance the ability of the community to more effectively provide substance abuse prevention and treatment through the establishment of collaborative groups.
